BACKGROUND

The Committee of Experts on Public Administration (CEPA) adopted 11 principles of effective governance at its seventeenth session. The principles, endorsed by the Economic and Social Council in its resolution 2018/12, highlight the need for pragmatic and ongoing improvements in national and local governance capabilities to achieve the Sustainable Development Goals. The principles are designed to ensure effective, accountable and inclusive institutions for sustainable development at all levels.

One of these is the principle of subsidiarity: To promote government that is responsive to the needs and aspirations of all people, central authorities should perform only those tasks which cannot be performed effectively at a more intermediate or local level. CEPA has identified five commonly used strategies for promoting subsidiarity, namely: (1) fiscal federalism and decentralization; (2) strengthening urban governance; (3) strengthening municipal finance and local finance systems; (4) enhancement of local capacity for prevention, adaptation and mitigation of external shocks; and (5) multilevel governance.

Engaging subnational governments and local communities in the design, implementation and monitoring of public policies fosters inclusive and participatory implementation of the SDGs. To effectively decentralize and bring government to the people, countries and their constituent subnational governments must work in new ways and with new partners, effectively using all the governance, fiscal, and managerial mechanisms at their disposal. This often involves strengthening public sector capabilities at subnational levels and taking steps to ensure the financial stability of subnational authorities. Decentralization outcomes also depend on the quality of multi-level governance mechanisms in pursuit of whole-of-government and whole-of-society approaches to the challenges of sustainable development.

The United Nations Department of Economic and Social Affairs has engaged leading experts and communities of practice in the preparation of a set of guidance notes that show how localization of the Sustainable Development Goals is not limited to integrating the global goals in local development plans but extends to strengthening decentralization, urban governance and local finance systems, and requires subnational authorities to be capable of effectively preventing and responding to external shocks. The benefits of decentralizing appropriate public sector functions and finances to subnational levels of government, and attention to multi-level governance arrangements are also covered. The guidance notes, available here, include information on how governments can both assess the current status and measure progress to ensure that governance systems address long-term challenges. The notes outline the strategies, assess the extent to which they are being or have been adopted in other countries, and highlight the methods of implementation, opportunities to engage in peer learning and research, and pursue further international development cooperation in accordance with country needs.

FORMAT AND OBJECTIVES OF THE WORKSHOP

Using the notes as a main point of reference, DESA/DPIDG, together with its Project Office on Governance plans to hold an online facilitated workshop on 12 March 2024 from 8 a.m to 10 a.m. (New York time, GMT-4). The workshop will focus on African countries, designed to share knowledge and provide a platform to connect participants with practitioners, the UN system and other organizations to take concrete, action-oriented steps towards more effective relations among levels of government in implementing the Sustainable Development Goals.

The workshop will

- Provide a platform to share knowledge and guidance on how to promote inclusiveness and subsidiarity for sustainable development in Africa;
- Increase understanding and awareness of the competencies and skills needed to apply the principle of subsidiarity with an emphasis on institutions in Africa at all levels;
- Highlight peer learning opportunities and research networks in specific practice areas; and
- Identify capacity development opportunities to enhance decentralization and relations with subnational governments that can be undertaken with the support of the UN system and other organizations.

The workshop is intended to benefit policymakers at central, regional and local levels, particularly in African countries. Relevant United Nations organizations, regional organizations and professional and academic communities, together with all relevant stakeholders, are invited to attend.
